UNIQUE CONSCIENCE SHOWS.

New Jersey Lawyer Wants Own License Revoked on Moral Grounds.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 2.—For the first time in the history of the state a notary public has surrendered his commission because he could not in good conscience administer an oath. J. Norman Shinn, of Pleasantville, returned Governor Fielder his commission as a notary, which was issued to him by President Wilson when governor.

Shinn has also made application to the supreme court for revocation of his license to practice law. This raises a new question for the court for which there is no precedent. Shinn addressed a letter to the governor's secretary in which he called him "Dear Brother." Shinn's letter follows:

"As a follower of my Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, I cannot take an oath, therefore, I should not ask my brother to do so. Also, I want no authority except from God.

Therefore, I decide to relinquish my right to act as a notary public of the State of New Jersey. My commission was issued in March, 1912.

"In Jesus' name, and Matthew 3: 23-27,

"J. NORMAN SHINN,

"His friend and servant."

The justices of the supreme court have deferred action on Shinn's petition.

Lumber Sales Dismissed.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 4.—Judge Kavanaugh dismissed without prejudice the suit of the E. H. Dodge Lumber company against Kribs and Jones, finding no evidence of fraud in big lumber deals that brought bankruptcy to E. J. Dodge.

The Weakly Bulldogger

MONDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1915.

Two-Foot Corn.

Jim Fowler says he has two prize corns which he would have exhibited at the O. W. R. & N. corn show at Walla Walla. Only the railroad company discriminated against him and refused to transport them free of charge. And he couldn't walk with them, he says.

Irrigate While The Irrigating's Good.

We note that the annual irrigation congress will be held in Portland during the last week in December. This is as it should be as we understand there are some 300 or 400 irrigation projects in that city which will quit operating at midnight on Dec. 31.

The Stanfield Optimist.

S. Norton Bobo was up from Stanfield last week and we asked him how the times were using him. He said he had no fear of hard times in this country. "With a commodious county jail, a kind sheriff who believes in feeding his prisoners, with plenty of crimes on the state calendar and the ability to commit as many as I please in case of emergency, I should worry about hard times," he said in effect.

Some Fellows Can't Play With Two Hands.

Norborne Berkeley, who loves a pinocchio game better than he does the memory of his forbears, was sitting in the Elks' club waiting for someone to take the seat on the other side of the table. None came for some time. Finally Bert Smith wandered in. Bert was recently kicked by a fractious auto and wears one arm in a sling. Berkeley sized him up as a possible opponent and finally queried dubiously, "Bert, can you play one-handed pinocchio?"

We'll Do It, Kernul Though You Are.

Kernul Boyd of the Athena Press gets so bold as to mention the editor of the Weakly Bulldogger by name in his columns and suggests that somebody will take a shot at him if he doesn't file the point of his pen. In answer we say that somebody is liable to take a shot at the editor of the Athena Mulligan Stew if he doesn't quit mentioning names.

We Are Seven.

Wanted to Trade—One Ford litney for a seven-passenger carryall. Apply R. W. Fletcher.—(Paid adv.)

He Wanted Readable Proof.

We wouldn't tell this on the judge if he hadn't insulted us once by telling us that he never believed anything he read in a newspaper. He knows this is true, so, perforce, he'll have to acknowledge the insult. Anyone who hasn't even seen a sample of Judge Fitz Gerald's handwriting won't appreciate this, but for the benefit of those same we will say that his police court docket is almost as undecipherable as a Chinese calendar. The judge always says inability to read his writing betokens a lack of education but they didn't teach Sanskrit or hieroglyphics in the schools we attended. One day a young swain brought a bride into the city hall and the judge tied the knot. He filled out a marriage certificate and presented it to them. Two days later we happened to be at the court house when County Clerk Saling was opening his mail. In one letter was a marriage certificate with this note appended: "Will you please have Judge Fitz Gerald send me another certificate and have him fill in the blanks by typewriting. I want to know whether I'm married or not."

Bob Was a Hellenus Hyena.

Bob Fletcher used to be a railroad-rider and he tells a story on one of his co-workers. They were overseeing a gang of Greek laborers. Bob got along fine with the foremen but they wouldn't warm up to the other boss. He expressed his regret at this situation one day to Bob. "I wish I could talk their language a little and I'd make them understand I want to be friendly with them." Bob had an idea, a diabolical one. "When you go down the track where they are just say 'Me onnos' to them," he said. "What does that mean?" the other questioned. "Me onnos," said Bob, "means 'I'm your friend.'" The Greeks quit their chattering and showed their habitual antipathy. The straw-boss walked up to them and with appropriate gestures said with much earnestness, "Me onnos." The Greek looked at him in bewilderment for a moment and then doubled up with convulsions. He repeated the remark to his countrymen and they, too, quit working to join in the laughter. The straw-boss eventually learned that "Me onnos" was the admission in Greek that he was a jackass, an idea that his underlings had long entertained.

Sure, Oil Floats.

Anyway Ned proved himself on the job. We're speaking of Ned Neill Olson and Johnson's chief repressant, tative here, and we're referring to the way he was victimized the other day. The concrete workers had just finished pouring the basement walls of the library when the weather took a turn for the colder and Ned was afraid the concrete would freeze. "The best thing to prevent that," said one of the sub-contractors, "is to pour some floating oil over it." "Floating oil?" queried Ned, "never heard of it." "Great stuff," said the sub-con. "Better get some." Ned fell for it, so eager was he to protect the walls. He inquired at every hardware store in town for floating oil and even telephoned to Walla Walla before he tumbled.

The Gasoline Bug's Song.

We reprint the following from the Marysville (Ky.) Messenger, because W. E. Brock says it is one of the most realistic poems written in a decade. My auto, 'tis of thee, short cut to poverty—of thee I chant. I blew a pile of dough on you two years ago, and now you refuse to go, or won't or can't. Through town and country side, you were my joy and pride; a happy day, I loved the gaudy hue, thy nice white tires so new, but now you're down and out for true, in every way. To thee, old rattlebox, came many bumps and knocks; for them I grieve. Badly thy top is torn, frayed are thy seats and worn; the whooping cough affects thy horn, I do believe. Thy perfume swells the breeze while good folks choke and sneeze, as we pass by. I paid for thee a price 'twould buy a mansion twice, now everybody's yelling "ice"—I wonder why. Thy motor has the pip, even the child chains slip, and woe is thine. I, too, have suffered chills, ague and kindred ills, endeavoring to pay my bills since thou wert mine. Gone is my bankroll now. No more 'twould choke a cow, as once before. Yet if I had the moon, so help me John—amen, I'd buy myself a car again, and speed some more.

Rancid Remarks.

When we first saw Ribbeldoffer-Skibinski in print we didn't know whether it was a new disease or another one of those Polish towns the Germans are camping around.

The Commercial Club of Fossil has gone on record as favoring a change in the name of that city. It does sound kind of contradictory to say, "The progressive little city of Fossil." Carl D. Gabrielson of Salem has written the editor of the Bulldogger to the effect that he thinks the Ford peace expedition is very ill-advised and misdirected. "But then who in h—am I?" he adds upon sober second thought.

They do say that the guy who put the war in ward is loose today.

They say that constant association with sheep tends to destroy a man's sanity but so far as we know every one of the woolgrowers who visited the Eastern Oregon State Hospital Friday returned safely.

"I went over to the polls today to be sworn in and I got cussed out instead," we heard one fellow lamenting on the street today.

JUDGE'S SHORTAGE GROWS.

Total of Missing Funds May Mount Up to Nearly $100,000.

HART, Mich., Dec. 1.—That shortages already found in the accounts of Probate Judge F. W. van Winkle, of Ocean county, indicate that the total of the missing funds may mount up to nearly $100,000 was admitted by state officials who are handling the case.

Already a deficit of approximately $75,000 has been discovered in Judge van Winkle's accounts, the officials asserted, and the examination of the court's books has just begun.

Only a few entries were made in the books by the jurist during the last six months, the examiners found. This was explained, they believed, by

Coffee

Without the airtight tins such coffee as Schilling's Best would not be possible.

We could buy it and roast it, but couldn't get it to you without loss of flavor and strength. We couldn't grind it evenly, take-out the bitterish chaff—and moneyback the result.

You owe such fine coffee and real economy to the tin that protects it.
